Aylmer-Kelly has recently moved into new offices at Pickwick Park in Corsham, giving more space and better facilities. "We moved into the offices in April with a smooth transition allowing us to keep working hard for all of our clients" said James Aylmer-Kelly, IT Partner.

Aylmer-Kelly was created by Alison Aylmer-Kelly starting as an accountancy firm just over 12 months ago. They are now offering IT support and services to their existing client base and also to new clients.

The accountancy side of the business is continuing to grow and Alison has recently been recruiting for a new qualified accountant to help with the increasing business. Alison, who is an ex-partner of a leading South-West firm of chartered accountants, comments "We have steadily been picking up new clients, some of which have needed a close level of support in order to get their accounting systems back on track and to ensure that the business owners have a full understanding of their financial position"

The IT services section is managed by James Aylmer-Kelly. "We believe these new IT services compliment the existing accountancy services excellently and our goal is to help reduce the burden of our clients managing these areas themselves" said James. As well as supplying general IT support to local businesses, the IT section has recently been involved in several projects including a new online business networking application.
